

TAKU's Terms of Use

1. The collections of Tampere University's Culture and Research Archive are open to all for research, teaching and learning, except for collections that are subject to restrictions. For justified reasons, the archive may also grant permission to use the collections for other purposes.
2. Clients of the Culture and Research Archive must sign a document to confirm that they will comply with data protection and copyright legislation, as well as with the archive's terms of use and any specific instructions on using the materials.
3. Original archival materials are not loaned outside the Cultural and Research Archive. Paid copies of the materials may be provided at the archive's discretion provided that making and releasing copies does not violate specific use restrictions or data protection and copyright legislation. The intended use of the copies must be specified when they are ordered, and the copies may not be used for other purposes or transferred or copied for third parties without permission. Copies must be returned or destroyed after use.
4. If the intention is to make archive materials publicly accessible, this may only happen after the user has obtained the necessary permissions from the holders of copyright and related rights in cases where the archive does not hold the rights. Fees are charged for the commercial use of the materials. Materials from the Culture and Research Archive may be published only with the permission of the archive and in compliance with the archive's publication policy. Users are obligated to provide the archive with one copy of any publication where materials from the archive are used.
5. When publishing, publicly presenting or citing the materials, the Culture and Research Archive must be acknowledged as the repository of the materials.
6. When publishing, publicly presenting, or quoting archival materials, good practices must be followed, and personal data must be protected appropriately. As a rule – and without exception when the archival material contains sensitive or intimate information – no names, personal data, or other identifying information of individuals may be disclosed or published without documented permission obtained from the individuals specifically for the intended use.
7. When donating materials to the archive, the donor signs an agreement that defines the terms and restrictions governing the future use of the material. The archive may also impose its own restrictions on the use of materials at its discretion. The archive reserves the right to decide whether to accept materials for archiving.